

History Comes To Life Again On House Tour

A two-day trip which will take you a 100 years or more into the past is scheduled for today and Saturday. It's the annual Georgetown House Tour. And, between the hours of 2 to 6 p. m. both days you can set your own arrival and departure times.

History will be telescoped again between 7 and 10 p. m. this evening when Prospect House, another itinerary item, will be open for Georgetown pilgrims. Now the residence of Representative and Mrs. Thurmond Chatham, it was once the State Department's guest house for distinguished foreign visitors.

Your excursion into Georgetown's eighteenth and nineteenth century past will benefit the work of St. John's Episcopal Church. Thomas Jefferson was a subscriber to its building fund and Francis Scott Key was one of its vestrymen.

Tea will be served from 3 to 6 p. m. in the church's parish hall.

Your round-trip tickets for the tour may be purchased at the Francis Scott Key Bookshop, the Little Caledonia, the Attic, and at the American Automobile Association. They are priced at $2.50. Houses open today: Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Samers, 3308 R st.; Col. and Mrs. Rene R. Studler, 1570 34th st.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Warner, 3327 P st.; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis S. Thompson, 1406 7th st.; Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Key, 3330 N st.
